

Jamie Caulfield

Senior Vice President & Chief Financial Officer
PepsiCo Foods North America

Jamie Caulfield is Senior Vice President and Chief Financial Officer for PepsiCo Foods North America. In this role, he is responsible for driving profitable growth, productivity and OCF for PepsiCo's ~$20 billion food business. This includes overall leadership and responsibility for finance at Frito-Lay North America (USA & Canada) and Quaker North America including reporting, planning, performance management & analysis, revenue management, capital spending, productivity, business development, control environment, risk management, strategy development and M&A integration.

Over his more than 25-year PepsiCo career, Jamie has held important roles including Senior Vice President of Investor Relations, where he oversaw communications with investors about PepsiCo's performance, plans, strategy, operations, capital structure and significant transactions.

Prior to that, Jamie was Chief Financial Officer of PepsiCo Beverages Canada, Vice President Corporate Strategy and Development, Vice President Financial Planning and Analysis, as well as a variety of senior finance roles in PepsiCo's Frito-Lay North America division.

Before joining PepsiCo in 1993, he was a partner at the accounting firm Coopers & Lybrand, where he served clients in the manufacturing and financial services industries.

Jamie holds a bachelor's degree in accounting from Loyola University Maryland and is a graduate of the Program for Leadership Development at Harvard Business School. Jamie currently resides in the Dallas area.